

I think it will turn out to be a waste of money, just like DECSS and all of the other copy protections turned out to be. There are people out here who have nothing better to do than to crack these codes and they will break it. Then there will be no way to do anything to update it since the decrypting device belongs to the consumer and is in millions of locations.